The Armenian population of Podgorica is the largest in the Balkans. It is estimated at 20,000.
The majority of them are in Montenegro, particularly in the town of Kotor, where they have been living for many years.
They are mostly Christians, and their religion is Orthodox.
They are engaged in various trades, such as agriculture, trade, and handicrafts. They are also involved in the construction industry.

The Armenian community of Podgorica is closely tied to the Armenian community of Kotor. They have a strong sense of national identity and are proud of their heritage. They are also involved in the political life of Montenegro, and have been active in the struggle for independence from Serbia.

The Armenian community of Podgorica has suffered greatly from the massacres committed by the Serbs during World War I.
Many Armenians were killed, and those who survived have had to flee their homes. They have sought refuge in various countries, including Turkey, Greece, and Russia.

The Armenian community of Podgorica is still recovering from the trauma of the war and the loss of so many loved ones.
